

Sussex Poets Competition 2015: Commended

Almond

by

Hannah-Rose Tristram, Brighton

I have been blanched like an almond by your touch.
Laid bare, wrung raw, rerouted by your words, and moved by the wordless dance inside your eyes.

Your sinews have sung to mine,
and every cell still echoes the effect.

I am enraptured, altered, wrecked.