

For Jacob

By Alex Underhill

I would write you a poem

But I am too scared

I know how heavy words weigh

And while everything in life seems impermanent,

Words seem to be fixed,

So you see I am much too scared of getting it wrong,

Saying too much or too little

So instead, I say nothing at all

But I want you to know

I want to write you a poem