

No Such Thing
By Jane Saddler

In a deafening rage, big as the sky
You are white-steaming fist-smashing fury.
Coughing up a shower of stones as we run
Along the promenade, blown laughing
By winter wind. And will we now go home
And tucked in, say there are no such thing as monsters?