

Poem 2.

By Ella-Mae Campling

Under the ground, the trees intertwine,
hidden to our mortal eyes,
I think, sometimes, that is my favourite friendship.
The ones where you remain fused at points despite how your branches reach out, and away, to new lands.
But you know, the friendship is infinite.