

The Back Step

By Emlyn Roberts

I sit, at night, sometimes,

On the back step of my house.

In this venule of the city,

The distant rush of the aorta, constant like gravity.

The stars, muted and brilliant,

Like you, when you are away.